Economy in Meats.
The high price of meats brings us to the problem of making the tougher portions take the place of the choice cuts.

The end of the porterhouse which is less tender, may be saved and put through the meat chopper with a piece of round steak, then you have your own hamburger steak, without worry, as to its composition. Mold into flat cakes as thick at the edge as in the center, so that they will cook evenly, and broil, turn often, season and serve with tomato sauce.

Tomato sauce seems very appropriate to serve with hamburger steak, but whichever sauce is used, it should be thick and smooth. To prepare tomato sauce cook together two table-spoonfuls each of flour and butter, add one and one-half cupfuls of tomato that has been simmered 15 minutes with a slice of onion, two cloves, a teaspoonful of salt and a few dashes of cayenne.

Make the sauce before the steak is broiled, strain and let it stand to keep hot over hot water. Serve poured around the steaks on a platter; garnish with parsley and serve.

The chuck makes a good piece to cook in a casserole (a stone covered dish). Wipe the meat with a cloth wrung out of cold water, place in the casserole, cover tightly and cook for several hours in a moderately hot oven. Season when half cooked, add vegetables such as carrots, potatoes and turnips previously parboiled until half cooked. The vegetables will give flavor to the meat and the meat will improve the vegetables. Another cheap cut of meat is the flank steak. This is an oval cut taken from the flank. After the most of the fat is removed it is scored diagonally on both sides. When pan-broiled and served with maitre d'hotel butter, it is most palatable and moderate in price.

Maitre d'Hotel Butter.—Cream one-fourth of a cup of butter, add one-half teaspoon of salt, one-eighth of a teaspoon of pepper, a dash of cayenne, one-half teaspoonful of chopped parsley and one-half a table-spoonful of lemon juice, adding it drop by drop, stirring all the time.
